

Commentary for the Society for Beksiński's works promotion

I established this Society with my wife in 1987. This move, however, did not gather momentum and until today remains dormant. My temperament makes me act on my own, without support of other fans of Beksiński. Many times, I have had an opportunity to become convinced that doing things on one's own is the best idea, because tiring as it may seem, it provides the only guarantee of solid work. Besides, in each team conflicts are inevitable, which I want to avoid at any cost. That is why I do not try to attract new members to this Society. This is only a showcase for the French authorities.
